I'm still a beginner in english and I'm confused when it comes to the use of the past perfect. I've been told that the were in this sentence is the past perfect and I've found many answers to this question on the web but none of them seems to answer it. I'll appreciate if someone could clarify this for me. Thanks in advance. There were several fish. A: Yes. There were several fish. and There were several fish. There were several fish. are both correct. The first one is called an infinitival clause (also known as a subordinating clause or 'embedded clause') "There were several fish" is fine but "There were several fish." is not. The'several' is a preposition, and what it modifies is the subject of 'fish'. Q: Why 82157476af
